

Thomas Drucker has been a student at Princeton University, Magdalen College, Oxford, the University of Toronto, and the University of Wisconsin (Madison). He has also played a good deal of tennis, table tennis, and chess, winning more games than he has lost in the long run but continuing to encourage others. He is best known for having been on the national championship College Bowl team in 1986 from the University of Wisconsin and for having edited a collection of papers on the history of mathematical logic. His next publication is an essay on why 'His Last Bow' is the best of the Sherlock Holmes stories and he has also written on mathematics in the works of Gilbert and Sullivan.